

坪林國小英語簡介

Our school, Pinglin Elementary School, is located next to the Xueshan Tunnel on National Highway No. 5, which leads to Yilan. It is situated in the administrative center of Pinglin Township, with convenient transportation and early development. In the past, before the highway was opened, Pinglin was considered the gateway between Taipei County and Yilan County, and the old street business district was once prosperous. However, with the opening of the tunnel, Pinglin's employment population moved out, and the number of students also decreased. With the development of the local real estate industry and the trend of declining birth rates, the Kuo-Lu Elementary School and the Yu-Kuang Elementary School merged into our school as branch campuses in 1985 and 2006 respectively, making our school the only elementary school in Pinglin Township. Therefore, our school's school district covers the entire Pinglin area, with a vast territory. Most of the mountainous area's students rely on the free community buses provided by the township office to commute to and from school.

Pinglin Elementary School has a century of history and, although the campus is small, it has abundant teaching resources. Under the diligent management of the former principals and the concerted efforts of all teachers and community parents, our school has established a solid foundation, and the school's affairs and students' performance have been recognized by the community parents. The campus environment, organizational atmosphere, administrative operations, teaching development, health promotion, special interest groups, art and humanities, and natural ecology all have their own characteristics and balanced development. The community parents enthusiastically participate in school education and work with the school to become the best education partners, jointly enhancing the quality of education. The school has become the best place to pass on culture in the school district.

Our teachers abide by their duties, teach with care, work diligently, and are eager to learn. They collaborate with the school and community parents, constantly stimulating new educational energy. In the future, we will strengthen our cooperation with overall education policies and the trend of educational reform, return to the essence of education, take students as the main body, and take "bringing every student up—healthy development, rich humanities literacy, life learning ability, lifelong learning vision, strong local sentiment, sustainable environmental awareness, respect for diversity, macro international vision" as educational goals, effectively integrate various resources, and combine the human and material resources of the community to develop the school's characteristics, allowing our children to have a more refined and excellent future, which is our sincere common wish and expectation.

坪林國小歷史沿革

Historical Development:

In 1905 (Meiji 38), the Shēnkēng Public School Pinglínwěi Branch was established.

In 1910 (Meiji 43), it became an independent school known as Pinglínwěi Public School.

In 1916 (Taisho 5), a new branch called Méizǐliáo Public School was established.

In 1921 (Taisho 10), Pinglín Public School was renamed and Méizǐliáo Branch became independent as Méizǐliáo Public School.

In 1922 (Taisho 11), a new branch called Dàshé Hú Education Field was established under Méizǐliáo Public School.

In 1930 (Showa 5), Dàshé Hú Education Field was transferred to Pinglín Public School.

In 1941 (Showa 16), Pinglín Public School was renamed Pinglín National School.

In 1945 (Republic of China 34), it was renamed Pinglín National School in Pinglín Township, Taipei County.

In 1947 (Republic of China 36), Dàshé Hú Education Field became independent as Yúguāng National School.

In 1949 (Republic of China 39), a new branch called Jīnxī Elementary School was established.

In 1951 (Republic of China 40), a new branch called Jiānshān Hú Class was established.

In 1968 (Republic of China 57), Pinglín National School in Pinglín Township, Taipei County was renamed Pinglín Elementary School.

In 1975 (Republic of China 64), Jiānshān Hú Class was abolished.

In 1985 (Republic of China 74), Kuò Lè Elementary School was closed and incorporated into Pinglín Elementary School.

In 1986 (Republic of China 75), a kindergarten was established.

In 1991 (Republic of China 80), a special education class was established.

In 1992 (Republic of China 81), a resource class was established.

In 1993 (Republic of China 82), a cram school was established.

In 1995 (Republic of China 84), Jīnxī Elementary School was closed.

In 2006 (Republic of China 95), Yúguāng National School was merged into Pinglín Elementary School's Yúguāng Campus.

In 2008 (Republic of China 97), the Pinglín Learning Center for the Elderly and Pinglin DOC Digital Learning Center were established.

In 2009 (Republic of China 98), the Kuò Lè Campus was rebuilt as Taipei County Ying Su Magic Academy.

In 2010 (Republic of China 99), Taipei County Ying Su Magic Academy's Kuò Lè Campus officially opened in March.

In 2011 (Republic of China 100), Taipei County was upgraded to a special municipality and Pinglin National Elementary School was renamed as Pinglin Elementary School in New Taipei City.

In 2014 (Republic of China 103), the New Taipei City Tea Fragrance Public Parent-Child Center and Silver Hair Club were established.

In 2017 (Republic of China 106), Pinglin Elementary School was honored with the Excellent Award for Developing Characteristic Schools.

In 2018 (Republic of China 107), the kindergarten at Pinglin Elementary School increased its classes